2. November General Meeting Preview – Redistricting Presentation from Latressa Wilson Alford, JD

For our November meeting we will have a presentation from Latressa Wilson Alford regarding the current statewide redistricting effort. Latressa will help us understand the redistricting process, the maps that have been released and what members of our community can do to make their voices heard in the redistricting process. Latressa has worked with the Black Census and Redistricting Hub to help communities understand the “Communities of Interest” model that the California Citizens Redistricting Commission is utilizing.

The California Citizens Redistricting Commission (CCRC) is a state agency created by the passage of California Proposition 11 in 2008, the "Voters First Act." It draws the boundary lines for California state legislative districts and Board of Equalization districts after each decennial census. Passage of Proposition 20 in 2010, the "Voters First Act for Congress," put the CCRC also in charge of re-drawing district lines for California's Congressional delegation.

The Commission is drawing the lines based on the Communities of Interest model, with a "community of interest" being a neighborhood, community, or group of people who have common policy concerns and would benefit from being maintained in a single district. It is intended as a way for a community to tell its own story about what neighbors share in common, and what makes it unique when compared to surrounding communities.

Why are communities of interest important?

Keeping communities of interest together is an important principle in redistricting as it can give voice to communities that have been traditionally left out of the political process, empowering communities to define themselves by telling their own stories and describing their concerns more directly to policymakers.

CCRC Commissioners invite input and want to hear why your city should or should not be drawn into proposed districts. For example, residents successfully convinced the Commissioners that "Congressional Map # 12" was flawed because it split Oakland and placed a portion of the city in a district with West Contra Costa County. Residents expressed similar concerns with "Congressional Map # 11" as it split East Oakland.

Arguments based on party politics or the desire for a community to remain represented by a particular elected official will not be convincing as the process is intended to be independent of politics. Democrats are the minority on the 14-person Commission, which is comprised of five Democrat, five Republican and four unaffiliated ("Other Party") members.

5. Recap of ECDC’s October 16th Virtual Dinner with Special Guest California State Attorney General Rob Bonta – Thank You, Everyone!

The El Cerrito Democratic Club hosted via Zoom its 69th Annual “Dinner” on Saturday, October 16th with California State Attorney General Rob Bonta joining as our keynote speaker.

Attorney General Rob Bonta shared his compelling life story and brought us up-to-date on the current work and priorities of his office. Although we were not able to meet in person for our dinner this year, many participants enjoyed delicious, elegantly-prepared charcuterie dinner boxes delivered to their home by local, Black-woman-owned Char•Kute•Rie caterers.

Thank you to everyone who attended. Very special thanks to Attorney General Rob Bonta for joining us; to Gabe Quinto for reaching out and inviting AG Bonta; to Carolyn Wysinger for connecting with Char•Kute•Rie and coordinating delivery of the meal boxes; and to Char•Kute•Rie for their delicious, home-delivered dinners.

We encourage you to support Char•Kute•Rie and other local businesses. (510) 221-8202; www.instagram.com/char.kute.rie/; www.facebook.com/CharKuteRie/

6. Recap of the East Bay Peace Action October 17th Conversation about the Intersection of Racism and Militarism – Recording Available

The connection between racism and militarism is a subject seldom discussed in the Peace Community, according to Jim Anderson, President of Peace Action of New York State. Anderson was one of several peace activists from across the country that took part in a thought-provoking discussion about the intersection of racism and militarism that took place at the October 17th East Bay Peace Action Annual Gathering.

A recording of the talk and transcript are available now on the East Bay Peace Action website, eastbaypeaceaction.org. A Spanish translation is forthcoming.

Leading the conversation was Afro-Latina Afghanistan War veteran Brittany Ramos DeBarros who recently stepped down from her position as organizing director of “About Face: Veterans Against the War” to run for Congress in New York’s 11th District.

Militarism, she said, represents a logic that the only way to create peace is through violence. DeBarros explored multiple ways white and gender supremacy, and militarism support oppression and economic exploitation.

8. Interesting Exhibit about Berkeley Politics

With People's Park and its controversies once again in the news, many of you may be interested in an exhibit entitled "From the Streets to the Ballot Box: Berkeley Politics in the 1970s" on display at the Berkeley Historical Society, 1931 Center Street in downtown Berkeley. Featuring selections from the David Mundstock Collection, the exhibit opened earlier this month and will remain through April 9, 2022. The late David Mundstock was a voting rights activist, supporter of progressive causes and political historian who amassed a large archive of posters, papers and other materials detailing the evolution of local politics. One particularly interesting piece on display is a poster of a young Ilona ("Loni") Hancock running for Berkeley City Council in 1971.

A review of the exhibit is on the Berkeleyside news website:
